Building Capacity for Nursing Research and Evidence-based Practice

Prof. Petra Brysiewicz, PhD, RN, FAAN, School of Nursing & Public Health, University of KwaZulu-Natal, Durban, South Africa

Petra Brysiewicz, Professor of Nursing with a focus on emergency care, has been involved in research and education of health professionals, primarily nurses, in South Africa and Africa for 25 years. She is extensively involved in graduate research supervision and plays a significant role in professional societies for emergency care in South Africa and Africa.

Prof. Brysiewicz is the communicating PI for Developing Research Innovation, Localisation and Leadership (DRILL) programme within the College of Health Sciences, University of KwaZulu-Natal, funded by Fogarty International Center of the National Institutes of Health, USA. She is also the editor-in-chief of the International Emergency Nursing journal and is an associate editor for a number of other national and international journals.

Petra Brysiewicz has partnered with other countries to create significant resources for emergency nurses and family nursing. In this guest lecture, she will focus on building capacity for research, presenting lessons learnt from developing research leadership in early career healthcare academics and clinicians in a low to middle income country. In particular, she will talk about how to embed nursing research into health systems, engage nurse clinicians in research, and to develop research competencies in novice researchers.
